Walmart's CEO Calls on Congress to boost minimum wage

BY MATTHEW BOYLE
BLOOMBERG NEWS

WASHINGTON — Walmart Inc. urged Congress to boost the federal minimum wage, a rare instance of the nation's biggest private employer demanding change on a contentious issue it's long been pilloried for.

Calling the current $7.25 minimum wage "too low," Walmart Chief Executive Officer Doug McMillon said Wednesday it's "time for Congress to put a thoughtful plan in place" to boost it. Walmart has raised its starting wage several times in recent years to the current $11 an hour, but that's still below rivals like Target Corp. and Costco Wholesale Corp.

McMillon has previously expressed support for a higher minimum wage, but this is the first time in more than a decade that a Walmart CEO has specifically demanded new legislation on the matter.

"It's clear by our actions and those of other companies that the federal minimum wage is lagging behind," McMillon said at the company's annual meeting in Rogers, Arkansas. U.S. Senator Bernie Sanders took his presidential campaign to the meeting and introduced a shareholder proposal to add representatives from Walmart's rank-and-file to the company's board. The motion has no chance of passing, but Sanders's presence has forced Walmart to address the issue of its treatment of workers head on.

With 1.5 million employees in the U.S., Walmart's stance on labor issues can often influence broader American workforce trends. It's unusual for Walmart, which has weathered criticism for years over its treatment of workers, to wade into the broader national debate on wages. But it has precedent: Former CEO Lee Scott said in a 2005 speech that the minimum wage then was "out of date with the times," and said "it is time for Congress to take a responsible look at the minimum wage."

'Unintended Consequences' McMillon also called for a deliberate approach Wednesday, saying any wage plan should take into account cost of living increases "to avoid unintended consequences."

His call for action comes as Vermont's Sanders, a 2020 Democratic presidential candidate, has frequently criticized the CEO's pay and Walmart's labor practices on the campaign trail, demanding that it boost starting wages to $15 an hour. Walmart gave McMillon a pay package worth almost $24 million last fiscal year.

"All we are saying to Walmart and the Walton family is to pay your workers a living wage," he said, "and that living wage is $15 an hour." Target has said it will reach that threshold by the end of 2020, while Amazon boosted starting pay for its warehouse workers to $15 an hour last year.

Amazon said last year that its lobbyists would start advocating for an increase in the federal minimum wage, which has been $7.25 an hour since 2009

Tiger Woods' 2000 US Open win was stunning, but Pebble Beach is always tough puzzle to solve

BY TOD LEONARD
THE SAN DIEGO UNION-TRIBUNE

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Blame the expectations on the U.S. Open in 2000.

The images of Tiger Woods carving up Pebble Beach Golf Links with freakish accuracy with his irons and otherworldly putting is the lasting impression of how dominant Woods can be while playing on the Monterey Peninsula.

In arguably his greatest triumph among 15 major wins, Woods seized that national championship by a record margin of 15 strokes and had his foes conceding he'd found a competitive gear none of them possessed.

In reality, Woods doesn't have the same cozy relationship with Pebble Beach he has at Torrey Pines, Firestone, Bay Hill or Augusta National.

On those four courses, Woods has a combined 29 victories.

Two wins at Pebble Beach are nothing to discount, but he clearly hasn't always looked totally comfortable on the short layout with tiny greens.

It's complicated. The last time Woods made a tournament appearance on the Monterey Peninsula, his mediocre 3-over-par 75 on Sunday was put to shame by Phil Mickelson's surging 64 as they played together in the last group of the 2012 AT&T National Pro-Am.

Mickelson prevailed over Woods by nine shots in the tournament that is played on three courses, and the San Diegan won here again in February to tie Mark O'Meara for the most victories at Pebble with five.

Another 75 on Sunday — after he fired 66 in the third round — doomed Woods in the 2010 U.S. Open here. He tied for fourth and lost by three shots to Graeme McDowell.

Throw in that Woods has only played a total of nine tournaments at Pebble as a pro, and that the 43-year-old's sharpness is in question after just eight starts this season, and the prospects get as foggy as a summer day in Carmel.

None of that seems to have dampened the enthusiasm of the man who won his fifth Masters in April.

"There's nothing like playing a U.S. Open setup here at Pebble Beach," Woods said Tuesday. "The golf course is not overly long. It's not big in that regard, but man, it's tricky. The greens are all slanted, very small targets. And if they ever firm up, then we have a totally different ballgame."

Calling Tuesday a "rest day," Woods chose not to play a practice round. He toured the layout Wednesday with a full round.

"It's more important for me to feel energized than it is to go out there and get wear and tear," he said.

Since missing the cut at the PGA Championship last month, Woods has revealed he was battling an undisclosed illness at Bethpage. "I was in rough shape," he said Tuesday.

Unlike before the PGA, he did get in a tournament start before the Open, and tied for ninth in the Memorial two weeks ago.

From the sound of it, Woods believes he and the field will experience a test at Pebble that is not very much different from the '00 Open he won at 12 under, becoming the first champion to finish the tournament double digits under par. Deeming Pebble's fairways

"plenty wide," Woods said. "We're all going to be playing from virtually the same spots, and especially if it dries out."

The longer guys will be hitting a shorter club (off the tee), and the shorter guys will be able to sneak driver down there.

"How you put the ball in the correct position is key. ... We don't have greens like this — this small and steep. So it puts a premium on iron play."

Woods pointed out that although he wasn't perfect in hitting fairways in 2000, "I had the best angles."

The biggest difference in '00 came on the greens, where Woods said he didn't miss a putt inside 10 feet. That is extraordinary on poa annua surfaces that sprout tiny buds in the afternoon that can serve as hurdles to a rolling golf ball.

Woods has done a lot of work on the greens already this week with coach Matt Killen.

"It doesn't take much to get off line on poa," Woods said. "Bent (grass) sits down; poa perks up. And good putts look like they should go in and don't."

"The trick to putting on poa is to make sure they're always below the hole. If you're putting downhill, it's like a Plinko effect; you're going to go every which way."

Woods isn't nearly the formidable putter he was 19 years ago. In his limited sampling this season, he ranks 73rd in the PGA Tour in strokes gained putting.

To the considerable upside: He is No. 1 in greens hit in regulation.

If Woods keeps his ball in the fairway, Pebble could be nearly as friendly to him as 2000, when he won the AT&T and U.S. Open with a combined score of 24 under.
